Far be it from us to contest a smoky gray suit and black loafers. While those standard issues aren't going out of style anytime soon, there is another oft-overlooked neutral out there. This spring, brown—in all of its rich, varied shades—is experiencing a bona fide resurgence. Pair Jaeger LeCoultre's alligator-straped, rose gold chronograph with Sebastien Grey's chocolate windowpane checked suit and Tom Ford's French-cuffed shirt in a creamy mocha for a dapper office look. Or add just a dash of dandy with Paul Smith's striped cappuccino socks and Salvatore Ferragamo's caramel wingtips. Any way you choose to wear it, there isn't much brown can't do for you. ■
